1. An antenna system was seen on the northern edge of Parbasdorf (P 49/S 50) about 500 meters northeast of the road bridge across Russ Brook and along the Markgrafneusiedl (P 49/S 50) - Parbasdorf-Adorklaa (P 49/S 50) road. * The rods were apparently of aluminum, the wires and cross bars of copper. Part of the installation was behind bushes and could not be seen.
2. Radio truck        with a trailer was standing on the northeastern bank of the brook, about 300 meters east of the road bridge. The trailer was loaded with a generator which was in operation. The radio truck was connected with the antenna system by several cables. There was an antenna beside the radio truck. *
3. The antenna installation which was previously 500 meters northeast of the road bridge across Russ Brook was no longer there on 3 July 1950. Only the antenna was still there.
4. Houses No 25 and 26 in Parbasdorf, occupied by Soviets, were connected by cables with the antenna installation on the northeastern bank of the brook.

*        Comment. For sketch of installation, see Annex. The set is apparently a radar set of the same type observed at all places in the Soviet Zone of Germany where the headquarters of a fighter division or fighter corps were located. To date the set has not been observed in Austria. From the location of this set it is not believed to have any connection with a fighter headquarters, contrary to the observations made in the Soviet Zone of Germany. It is possible that the radar set is being used as a fighter control set (GCI) or an early warning set.
